Use care with home insulation

Avoid the 'vapors' with proper installment

It's probably been a long time since you heard of a woman swooning from a case of "the vapors"-especialy since this mysterious ailment seems to have plagued only females in 18th centruy romantic novels.

While you may not know of a woman with this affliction, you may have heard of a house suffering from a case of the vapors.

Most are caused by the improper installation of insulation. This is why the Mineral Insulation Manufacturers Association advises do-it-yourselfers to pay careful attention to the vapor barrier when installing fiber glass or rock wool insulation.

A vapor barrier is the moisture-resistant covering found on one side of insulation batts and blankets.

Since every home is prey to "the vapors," due to moisture released from cooking, showering and just breathing, MIMA suggests you heed these rules concerning vapor barriers:

- When insulating your attic floor, place batts and blankets with the vapor barrier side down if there is no insulation on your attic floor.
- If you are installing new insulation over old on your attic floor, use insulation without a vapor barrier. If unfaced material is not available, use the vapor barrier type but remove the vapor barrier.
- When insulating other areas of the home such as crawl spaces, basement ceilings and walls in new additions or attic conversions, always have the vapor barrier or polyethylene over the tear.
- When installing insulation in walls of a new addition, staple the vapor barrier edges tight against the studs, eliminating all gaps.
- Don't leave the vapor barrier exposed. Cover it with gypsum board or other building code-approved material.

Finally, don't overlook the tax break you may be entitled to by adding insulation. This and other energy conservation home improvements are eligible for a tax "credit" of as much as $300.

Additional advice and instructions on adding insulation are available in two booklets, "How to Save Money by Insulating Your Home" and "Save on Home Heating and Cooling Costs: Insulate Your Attic Now."

Each is available for 40 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope sent to Mineral Insulation Manufacturers Association, Dept. SR, 382 Springfield Ave., Summit, NJ 17901.

Tax break possible with door weatherizing

Installation of a new, properly weatherstripped wood entry door will cut enegry costs and may qualify for a tax credit.

The new wood door, with snug fitting weatherstripping and a new, sealing threshold, will reduce heating and cooling costs year after year.

The weatherstripping also may qualify you for a Federal tax savings; consult the IRS Publication 903, "Energy Credit for Individuals."
